

DEMOCRATS BREAK ALL PRECEDENTS IN NAMING ROOSEVELT

First Time in 152 Years Any American Political Convention Gave 3 Nominations

GIVE NEW PLATFORM
Strongly Anti-War in Character; Vice-Presidential Sentiment Divided

By William K. Hutchinson

CHICAGO, July 18.—The Democratic party, at its 28th national convention, today shattered all American political precedents by nominating President Franklin Delano Roosevelt for a third term.

It marked the first time in 152 years of American political conventions that any party gave a President three successive nominations.

The nomination was made unanimous by acclamation, after the New Deal-dominated convention crushed three rival candidacies, roared down an effort to condemn the third term and gave Mr. Roosevelt an anti-war platform on which to combat Wendell Willkie, the Republican nominee, for four more years in the White House.

The President will accept the third term nomination, probably in a radio address to bring the convention to a close tonight. There is much confusion, however, over the identity of his running-mate.

Rumors spread immediately that the President favored Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones, of Texas, as his Vice-Presidential nominee, because Secretary of State Cordell Hull had refused the honor. These rumors were contradicted by others, indicating the Texas delegation will endorse another Texan, House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, for second place on the ticket.

New Dealers were touting Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace for the Vice-Presidential nomination. Followers of Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt declared the President would not intervene and that the Hoosier would be named as the "free choice" of the convention. A half-dozen other candidacies were booming.

CHICAGO, July 18.—The Democratic National Convention today gave the nation a new platform, adopted with only a scattering of dissenting votes, which is strongly anti-war in character and which boldly seeks to make the New Deal the No. 1 issue of the Presidential campaign.

A futile, last-minute effort by Rep. Elmer J. Ryan, Minn., to write an anti-third term plank into the platform on the convention floor, although supported by many delegates on a voice vote, was overwhelmingly defeated shortly before the final vote.

Interventionists, who made an unsuccessful and bitter fight in the platform committee for a strong declaration of aid to European democracies and were defeated, abandoned any attempt at a convention floor fight.

The platform, in which an unmistakable effort was made to relieve the Democratic party of the label "war party," was praised by such outstanding isolationists and critics of the Roosevelt foreign policy as Senators Wheeler, Mont.; McCarran, Nev.; and Walsh, Mass.

On the all-important question of foreign policy the platform, after promising resistance to all aggression and adequate defense, said:

"The American people are determined that war, raging in Europe, Asia and Africa, shall not come to America. We will not participate in foreign wars, and we will not send our army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside the Americas, except in case of attack. We favor and shall rigorously enforce and defend the Monroe Doctrine."

CHICAGO, July 18.—There was divided Vice-Presidential sentiment and the fuel for a possible squabble in the Pennsylvania delegation as it gathered to caucus at the Democratic National Convention today.

With only the selection of a running-mate for President Roosevelt remaining.

British Claim Wrecking The Dortmund-Ems Canal

LONDON, July 18.—(INS)—German planes today again raided southeast and southwest England, dropping numerous bombs and killing "a few" persons. But at the same time, it was announced that Royal Air Force fighters had bombed and wrecked the double aqueduct of the Dortmund-Ems Canal, important Nazi transportation link.

The Admiralty announced that a British cruiser had been damaged in the Mediterranean on July 8th by Italian airmen, and that "some casualties" were suffered. The damage, however, "did not affect the fighting ability of the cruiser in partaking in the action with the Italian fleet on July 9th," it was stated. The cruiser is at present still in active service, it was added.

The following guests received horns and noise makers as favors: Walter Bowker, Helen McHugh, Ruth and James Humphried, Bernard Moeller, Jr., Ruth and Joann Simpson, James Weston, Mrs. Harry Worley, Mrs. J. McNeal, Mrs. B. Moeller, Mrs. H. Brown. Jack received many gifts.

FRENCH RETREATS DUE TO FIFTH COLUMNISTS

War Correspondent in Uncensored Story, Tells of French Becoming "Rattled"

BUT RALLIES FOLLOW

(Back in America and free from censorship, Kenneth Downs today writes another chapter of a series revealing the real reasons for the collapse of France.)

By Kenneth Downs
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 18.—A day before that mighty, swiftly-advancing Nazi barrage had announced the doom of the Ninth Army, I had stood in a room which saw the end of a typical German fifth columnist—the kind of men who spread panic through the French forces everywhere in that vital sector and contributed incalculably to their collapse.

A captain of the intelligence service of the Sixth Motorized Division of the adjoining Second Army—a truly heroic division which destroyed the gross Deutschland Regiment of a crack Panzer Division, the elite regiment of the entire German Army, occupying a place similar to that of the old Imperial Guard—told me the story.

The captain was telling me how his men had rallied after the first demoralizing shock of the new warfare.

"In the first two or three days of the terrible dive-bombing attacks, our men were rattled," he explained. "There were 'flottments' everywhere, broken units drifting back from the front. But when we stopped them—we at headquarters didn't sleep for five days; we were manning all roads—and questioned them, they always seemed surprised. 'But isn't there an order for a retreat?' they invariably asked. 'When we told them there was not, they unfailingly hastened back to their posts.'"

I asked what had led the men to retreat in such cases. The captain seemed amazed at my ignorance. "But the cinquieme column; of course," he said. "They were everywhere, everywhere."

"But how did they get in? How did they operate?" I asked. "Ah," he said, "they were here in advance. They came at night. They dropped by parachute. They got in by all means. They were carefully trained. They had French uniforms. They knew their stuff."

"We got one right here where you stand. You see that spot on the floor?" He pointed to the floor of what had been the dining room of the farm house.

"This man was dressed in the uniform of a second lieutenant. He came late at night, breathless. He said he was from the adjoining division. He said: 'We have been hard hit. Our position is hopeless. We are even cut off from the army headquarters. Can you put me through to the army?'"

"We were stunned to learn this division on our left flank was smashed. While preparing to rush through a call to the army we fortunately followed the routine and asked for his papers. He reached in his pocket. A look of consternation crossed his face. He said, 'My God, I have even lost my papers!'"

"We were at once on guard and began to question him. He saw his game was up and reached for his pistol. A little captain from Paris beat him to the draw. He shot where you stand. He had great nerve, but he was unlucky."

This was the technique employed by Nazi agents at the front. They seldom ordered retreats. They spread panic by innuendo, disseminating rumors of retreat, or indicating that units on all sides were fleeing. It was effective. It was astounding to find how well this technique worked out in an army as compact as the French.

The Germans won the war with their all-out attack on and over and within the French Ninth Army. They seized the bridges of the Meuse and their tanks were pouring across them before the army headquarters had even begun to realize the necessity of blowing them up.

When weary, ineffective Generalissimo Maurice Gamelin, who was never meant to lead the army at war and whom the lowest subaltern in the army felt would be replaced in time, learned of the break-through on the Meuse, he did an incredible thing. Before his staff at La Ferte he threw up his hands in despair. He clutched his gray temples and said: "Point est perdu" (all is lost). He was right.

No army ever won a more brilliant

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

The Landis clan will hold its 25th reunion on August 24th, at Perkasee Park, program starting at two p. m., d. s. t.

Music, subjects of interest, prizes, special hour for children, and other features making it a pleasant time for all are being prepared by the committee.

Four things contribute to success in the raising of goats, said Robert H. Olmstead, a member of the faculty of State College, at the meeting of the Delaware Valley Milk Goat Association held in the Administration Building, Doylestown, Monday afternoon.

Speaking on the subject of dairy practices and maintenance of records covering production and testing, Mr. Olmstead declared that most essential to be successful in the raising of goats is the man. He must have a thorough knowledge of breeding and the principles of feeding.

Other items of importance, Mr. Olmstead informed the members, are the kind of animal, the type of feed and the markets. Mr. Olmstead showed a number of colored slides to illustrate his points.

Another speaker at the meeting was County Agent William F. Greenwalt, who commented on the value of 4-H clubs and his work in respect to interesting the 4-H club members in dairy goats.

The Kiwanians of Doylestown were at Anglesea, N. J., yesterday, for their annual fishing trip.

Nate Gorelick was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, the party going on the Wildwood II.

"Do our schools give the kind of education needed by the young people of today?" was discussed at the meeting of the Chalfont Grange by Mrs. C. F. Singleton, who declared that they do not teach anything about the use and significance of money as a medium of exchange, and this, it was intimated, should be done.

Mrs. Singleton said schools have changed from the one-room buildings to the large, many-roomed structures. Transportation methods, she said, have changed, but the general run of education, she contended, seems to remain the same.

Four properties near New Hope changed ownership during the past week.

One was the Wiley property at Centre Hill, which was purchased by a retired clergyman and his wife who had been living in the western part of New York State. The property has been unoccupied since the death of Mrs. Wiley. The new owners expect to make some improvements to the building.

ENGLISH MOTHER AND TOTS SAFE IN NEWTOWN

Family of Major Arthur Lockhart Arrives in U. S. for Duration of War

BOYS MISS THEIR DAD

NEWTOWN, July 18.—Three small English children, together with their mother, have sought refuge with relatives here for the duration of the war. The party of four which arrived in New York on the "Eastern Prince," Tuesday, included the youngest child aboard that ship, 14-month-old Caroline Lockhart.

Bringing Caroline and the other two Lockhart children to the United States and safety from Nazi raiders, Mrs. Arthur Lockhart, wife of Major Lockhart, arrived here.

VIENNESE PLAYWRIGHT'S SON TO STAGE COMEDY

Heinrich Schnitzler to Produce
"Affairs of Anatol" at New Hope

DURING COMING WEEK

Heinrich Schnitzler, noted European director and son of the famous Viennese playwright, the late Arthur Schnitzler, will stage his first production in this country when he directs his father's celebrated comedy, "The Affairs of Anatol," at the Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, the week of July 22nd. Louis Calhern, stage and screen star, who is leading man of the company at New Hope, will play the title role.

Mr. Schnitzler, who has been in America for two years, was the first director of the Volks theatre in Vienna where he staged nearly 50 productions. Prior to that he was one of the most popular actors at the State Theatre in Berlin. Among the productions in which he appeared were Max Reinhardt's "Romeo and Juliet," in which he played Romeo; and "Hamlet," in which he played Horatio. He has appeared in several of his father's plays both in Vienna and Berlin, among them "The Last Days of Pompeii," "The Last Days of Pompeii," "The Last Days of Pompeii," and "The Last Days of Pompeii."

Mr. Schnitzler has directed several productions of "The Affairs of Anatol" in Europe. The first play in English he staged was his father's "Professor Bernhardt," which he put on in London four seasons ago. Since coming to this country Mr. Schnitzler has been associated with the Neighborhood Playhouse, City College and Queens College, New York City, where he lectures on the theatre. This winter he plans to stage several Broadway productions.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Revealing Instance

Chicago, July 17. FOLLOWING this strange convention, which has brushed aside the unbroken, though unwritten, law that no President shall serve more than eight consecutive years, many things that have happened here will be analyzed and their significance stressed. In its record there is copious material for attack.

AT this time, however, two things stand out more conspicuously than any other. One is the degrading willingness which some of the Roosevelt leaders showed to do practically anything to keep down open-floor opposition to the third-term nomination. Last night in the resolutions committee this willingness carried them to the point where they practically agreed to compromise and betray the integrity of the President's foreign policy and permit the isolationists on the committee to write a plank on foreign affairs that pleased Senator Burton K. Wheeler and Senator Bennett Clark. Had it gone through as agreed upon it would have rendered Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy doubly ridiculous, because it clashes head-on with his public policy and public declarations. It not only opposed corruption but it pledged the Government to refrain from any assistance to England, limited us to "sympathetic aid." It was the threat of a minority report offering an anti-third-term resolution on the floor which was used as a blackjack to force an acquiescence which would have left Mr. Roosevelt in an extremely dubious position.

IT is true that the stage has been reached where platforms are relatively unimportant.

Soviet Troops Advance Upon Rumanian Villages

Bucharest, July 18.—Russian troops today were in possession of 12 Rumanian villages in the Pomarna and Dorohoi districts of Bukovina, having marched beyond the territory recently ceded to the Soviet, and Russian officers threatened to occupy further territory west of the Pruth River if Rumania quits the Balkan bloc, it was reported in Bucharest. Rumanian troops offered no resistance, withdrawing before the Soviet advance.

Germans Report Direct Hit On British Factory

Berlin, July 18.—Direct bomb hits upon the British armament factory at Greenock and attacks upon England's famous military camp at Aldershot were reported today by the German high command in a communique which stated—

"German warships operating in overseas waters sank a further 30,000 tons of enemy commercial shipping. German troops on vessels of the Navy landed on the island of D'Oussant, which is off the coast of Brittany."

"German combat planes attacked the training camp at Aldershot as well as aerodromes, industrial works and harbor establishment in south and central Britain. Especially big fires were observed at the airport at Tunbridge, as well as in the industrial works at Eastbourne and in the harbor establishments at Portland. The large armament works at Greenock received several full hits."

Annenberg May Surrender To Lewisburg Warden

Chicago, July 18.—M. L. Annenberg, who on Monday is scheduled to begin serving a three-year term in Lewisburg, Pa. Federal Penitentiary for income tax evasion, may surrender to the warden at Lewisburg, instead of submitting to custody in Chicago, it was reported today.

The publisher of The Philadelphia Inquirer lost his last appeal from the prison sentence yesterday when Federal Judge Wilkerson denied his plea for probation. Because Annenberg pleaded guilty to the charge on which he was sentenced, no further avenue of appeal is open to him.

Negro Woman Killed In Automobile Crash

Hammonton, N. J., July 18.—Estelle Anderson, 32, Negro, of Philadelphia, was killed and four men were injured seriously today in a head-on automobile collision on White Horse Pike at Ancora Bridge, five miles west of Hammonton. Among those injured were John Bernardo, 28, and Charles Falucca, 40, both of Camden, and Joseph Kahhat, 48, of Philadelphia.

ABRAHAM L. SHAW DIES; HULMEVILLE RESIDENT

Some Years Ago He Conducted Hulmeville Park;
Ill For A Long Period

FUNERAL ON SATURDAY

HULMEVILLE, July 18.—A resident of Hulmeville for the past several decades, and known to thousands through his operation for many years of Hulmeville Park, Abraham L. Shaw died last evening in Collingswood, N. J. Death occurred for the 78-year-old Hulmeville resident at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. W. Juengling, Jr., Fern avenue, Collingswood. Ill for a lengthy period, his condition gradually grew worse, and death last evening was due to complications.

The first part of the month, Mr. Shaw was taken to Stone Harbor, N. J., and while there his condition became more grave, and he was later removed in an ambulance to the Juengling home.

Born at Flushing, Bensalem Township, Mr. Shaw had spent his entire life-time in this part of Bucks County, residing for the great portion in Hulmeville borough. For many years he owned and conducted Hulmeville Park, and of late years operated green-houses at his residence on Green street.

His wife, Caroline Hertzog Shaw, and the one daughter, Mrs. Juengling, survive.

The service is arranged for Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, at the Haefner home here. Burial will be made in Beechwood Cemetery, and friends may call Friday evening.

Miss Isabel Nilis Is Feted at Kitchen Shower

Mrs. William Wichser, Monroe St., entertained friends at her home on Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Isabel Nilis, Wilson avenue, the affair being a kitchen shower. White decorations were used. The gifts were placed on a table underneath a white bell.

For contract bridge, prizes were awarded to Miss Miriam Nilis, and Miss Helen Arnold; pinocle, Mr. Harry Arnold and Mrs. Edward Hunter. Refreshments were served, and favors were small pink watering cans.

Others present: the Misses Olive Whyatt, Esther and Dorothy Bair, Margaret Fox, Phyllis Wichser, Alice Keating; Mrs. William Kihl, Mrs. Edward Priestley, Mrs. Edward Wallace, Mrs. Edward Kelber.

HARRIMAN HOSPITAL IS PLANNING LAWN FETE

Also Seeking Contributions In Drive to Care for Overhead Expense

AID UNDERPRIVILEGED

Harriman Hospital Auxiliary announces the dates of its annual lawn fete as being from August 5th to 10th inclusive, the Auxiliary members backing and aiding in the movement to raise funds.

In letters just issued to residents of Bristol, in which contributions are also sought, the auxiliary president, Mrs. William E. DeGroot, informs of the overhead expense incurred in treatment of underprivileged, and those of the middle class bracket.

In part the statement reads: "Our institution has a capacity of 52 beds and six bassinets. When the hospital was purchased in 1922 the surrounding ground was not included in the sale so that in the course of years we have accumulated an area of approximately one and one-half acres constituting a permanent site and environment for hospitalization. Additions have been made and we now have a separate emergency department fully equipped which diverts from the hospital itself the disturbance and confusion arising in emergencies."

"In our effort to defray the overhead expense incurred in treatment of the underprivileged and those of the middle class bracket, during the past two years we have tried to acquaint ourselves with the modernization of hospital finance. We are now recognized as a participating hospital with the Abington Plan and have courtesy emergency rights with the Associated Hospital Service of Philadelphia. From information received there are now approximately 300,000 people insured in these fine projects and they appear to be a success. In time, if the executives succeed in lowering the cost of hospital insurance, a great assistance will have been realized to make the burden of hospital maintenance less burdensome, which, however, has not yet become tangible with us. Until the time arrives when the true value of all types of hospital and medical insurance can be determined we will be compelled to request our friends to assist us as substantially as possible. In civic planning it is obvious that no community can be classified as successfully and completely administered without inclusion of modern hospitalization. Annually we meet the specifications of the State of Pennsylvania through its bureau of hospital licensure and are accepted under their authoritative guidance as a fully equipped hospital."

Contributions are being received by Mrs. William E. DeGroot, treasurer of Auxiliary; and William H. H. Fine, assistant cashier, Farmers National Bank.

Tavern Porter Admits The Murder of Child

Chicago, Ill., July 18.—An eight-year-old girl was found beaten to death today, her body cruelly mutilated and stuffed behind a heating plant boiler in the basement of a building less than a block from her home.

The little victim was Mazie F. Smith, daughter of a milkman. A few hours after a posse of citizens organized search for her killer, one of the searchers, Robert Schroeder, 26-year-old tavern porter, was arrested and police said he confessed that he murdered the child.

A physician who examined the body said the girl apparently had been criminally assaulted. Her head had been battered, and her body bore many wounds which doctors said might have been inflicted with an ice pick.

The body was discovered by Policeman Edgar Ward, best friend of the girl's father, Harold. Policeman Ward began looking for the girl at the urgent plea of the father, who became worried when she failed to return home after having gone out to play.

It was in the basement of the building where Schroeder was employed that the youngster's body was found. The girl was lured into the basement and beaten unconscious with a heavy steel furnace shaker, according to police.

BRISTOL DESCRIBED AS IDEAL SPOT FOR LOCATING AIR BASE

"One of The Most Important Places From Point of Defense," Says Report

KANE COMMITTEE

Suggests Island in Delaware
As Site, Near Aircraft Plane
And Base Here

(By International News Service)

HARRISBURG, July 18.—Bristol was described in the report of the Kane special legislative committee studying air defense today as "one of the most important places for an airport in the State from a point of national as well as State defense."

The committee pointed out that the Bucks county community is the home of one of the largest aircraft factories in the United States—"which might be terribly important in the event of enemy attack from the Atlantic seaboard."

Oddly enough, the committee added, the best site for an airport in Bristol doesn't happen to be in Pennsylvania. The report said:

"And this is because of an unusual legal condition that the boundary of New Jersey is on the Pennsylvania side of the island on which the airport should be located. That location is away out in front of any others for the reason that it is ample in size, of a level nature and yet above the flood level."

"What a remarkable and splendid thing it is that we have this natural airbase on the land where a river is also wide enough for a seaplane base, and there is a factory there which manufactures just this type of craft that can use either one. We have an amphibian military base and an amphibian factory located there."

"However, the island belongs to the State of New Jersey, the city and aircraft plant belong in Pennsylvania."

"There is an excellent legal precedent for Pennsylvania and New Jersey getting together and building a joint airport in the Delaware River on the island between Burlington, N. J., and Bristol."

Solemn Novena Will Be Conducted at St. Ann's

A public Solemn Novena of masses and prayers in honor of St. Ann will begin this evening in St. Ann's Church, Dorrance and Pond streets.

Raymond Scheetz, well known magician, who makes his home in New Hope, has been an outstanding illusionist for more than ten years.

Medical Journal Reports Finding Eyestrain Cure

By International News Service
CHICAGO, July 18.—(INS)—If eyestrain makes your lids twitch and burn, or react painfully to strong light, then there's hope for a cure. The news comes from the Journal of the American Medical Association, reporting on the successful use of a new vitamin derivative in such cases.

Drs. V. P. Sydenstricker and H. M. Cleckley of Augusta, Ga., W. H. Sebrill of Washington, and H. D. Kruse of New York reported that in 47 cases patients were cured of these disorders by administrations of riboflavin, part of the vitamin B complex.

Mild cases were cured in 24 hours by use of tablets or capsules containing this concentrated vitamin, while more stubborn symptoms were relieved in about twice that time. Riboflavin is found in milk, eggs, green vegetables, liver, beef and dry or brewers' yeast.

FRANCE GOES FASCIST

Three months ago nobody, least of all Frenchmen, would have believed that at a word from Hitler France would change almost overnight from a democracy to a Fascist state, with two of her greatest generals—Petain and Weygand—as the leading figures in the new regime. Even to have breathed such a thought in Paris would have exposed one to mayhem. But the revolution was already in the making.

Pierre Laval, former premier, was one of the chief architects. Throughout his term he showed time and again where his sympathies lay. He admired the totalitarian "ideal." Now he will be one of a triumvirate to rule the destinies of the Nazified French state. With him former Labor Minister Marquet and General Weygand, the man on whom France pinned her hope of victory, will co-operate; with the aged Petain acting as figurehead during the transition.

Observers acquainted with conditions in France are not greatly surprised at the attitude of Laval, Petain and Marquet; but how can Weygand's endorsement of the new Vichy government be reconciled with his role of the last few weeks? However sincere and energetic his efforts to hurl back the invading Nazis, his about-face is a symbol of the inner decay which is responsible for the present plight of France.

One curious by-product of the shift from democracy to Fascism is the resurgence of the royalists. All these many decades they have never given up hope of restoring the House of Orleans to the throne; and today, though subject to the limitations imposed by dictatorship, they may regain the titles and the prestige lost in the debacle of 1871. Hitler and Mussolini, however, will see to it that they do not recapture the power.

If the Duc de Guise, long a joke of American paragraphers, or his heir, the childless Count of Paris, is placed on the throne, he will occupy a position similar to that of King Emanuel in Italy. The sanctity of the crown will be at the disposal of whatever fuhrer rules France.

The slow task of forging a democracy out of the shambles left by the Napoleonic wars and the futile ambitions of the House of Orleans has been nullified by the stroke of a pen. Let it be remembered, however, that there is nothing sacred in the figure three. A third republic is passing; a third despotism is about to be born. So why not a Fourth Republic, built on stronger foundations than the last one?

The Hindus keep up with the news. Bombay reports that when a rumor went around that Hitler contemplated visiting India, with his armies the Hindus buried out and buried more than $2,000,000,000 in gold deep in the ground.

All Hitler, who was exasperated to no end by the "severity" of the Versailles peace terms, is going to take over from France is everything she possesses except Devil's Island and her absurd custom of letting men be free.

Former residents of the islands of Guernsey and Jersey, who were evacuated to England, may now wish they had a muley strain in their cows when Hitler tries to milk them.

America may have plowed up too many pastures. But the pasture the Trojan horse is grazing on needs turning under, too.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baker and son George enjoyed a trip along the New Jersey coast Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Leigh and son, Prospectville, were recent callers in Emilie.

WILTON, Me. — (INS) — Floating Islands—Wilton has one. Wilton which won notice because of its upside-down hill, now boasts of a three-acre island which floats about the surface of Wilton pond, and is causing much official concern in the fear it may develop into a navigational menace. The island, once part of the mainland, broke away from the upper end and has been moving about the pond.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

OUR Grandmothers thought salads were a necessary evil at a meal, and little toward exploring their gastronomic possibilities. Her granddaughter, however, has learned that particularly in summer an entire meal can be built around a salad. Sunday might be an excellent day to vary the menu by planning either a fruit or vegetable salad that is almost a meal in itself. And many are the fruit and vegetable combinations which might be selected from the markets this week. Cabbage, peppers, cauliflower, celery and tomatoes are all specially priced, and iceberg lettuce and peas remain at the low prices they have been for the past few weeks. In the fruit line, fresh peaches, plums, cantaloupes and cherries are specials for the week, and may be combined in fruit cups, or served in their natural states.

Here are three menus at different price levels planned by Cora Anthony of the A&P kitchen, with salads or salad variations as an important part of the menu:

Low Cost Dinner
Broiled Frankfurters
Hot Potato Salad with Sour Cream Dressing
Picked Beets
Coleslaw
Rolls and Butter
Bowl of Fruit
Tea, Coffee or Milk

Moderate Cost Dinner
Hot Clear Consomme
Cold Roast Lamb
Potato Chips
Jellied Vegetable Salad with Carrots
Cabbage, Green Peppers, Celery
Fresh Rolls and Butter
Fresh Cherry Upside-Down Cake
Coffee, Tea or Milk

Very Special Dinner
Broiled Chicken
New Potatoes with Butter Sauce
"Afternoon" New Peas
Raspberry, Blueberry and Cantaloupe Salad
Rolls and Butter
Vanilla Ice Cream with Chocolate Sauce
Tea, Coffee or Milk

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

It was almost dawn when the party finally broke up. When Judith said her goodbyes to her hostess, Mrs. Van Mathas asked her to come to see her.

"I want to know you better. My son is fond of you. Won't you come to see an old lady?"

"I'll come to see a very charming one," Judith promised.

"You've been good to my boy."

"We're terribly fond of Dick, Mrs. Van Mathas."

"Then that's settled. You must come to stay with me this summer. It's lovely here. You can swim and sun bathe."

As Judith came downstairs, Tex was in earnest conversation with Sonia. He turned quickly to Judith when she came down the hall. "They insist on taking us as far as Pennsylvania station," he said, motioning toward Sonia.

So with Sonia's friends, they started for Manhattan. The men insisted on stopping off for breakfast. The whole thing was quite a strain on Judith. She wondered how long she could keep going.

Sonia monopolized Tex. Only once did she notice Judith. It was when she then proposed a toast: "To the future!"

Sonia smiled at Judith fixedly.

"To your success!" Judith murmured with sarcasm.

Sonia kept her voice low. "That's dangerous—a challenge?"

"I like danger," Judith's tongue could be sharp.

"What are you two talking about?" Tex asked.

"The future," Judith was quite reckless. Tex looked a little uneasy.

It amused his wife to see him squirm just a little.

Finally goodnights were said. Sonia had a few words with Tex, as he said goodbye to her.

Later in the cab Tex mentioned Sonia. "What a girl!" He squeezed his wife's hand. "You were swell to be such a sport."

"Why not? I'm not afraid of her any more."

"And you needn't be. I wouldn't trade you for anybody in the world."

Yes, it was going to be a happy New Year. When they arrived home, her heart was still full of love for it. Her husband! She walked up the steps and felt she would have liked to kiss the door itself!

"Happy New Year, house!" she murmured.

Next morning they slept late and Tex awoke with a terrific headache.

"Never again will I drink champagne. Never!"

Judith had been up some time. The door bell had awakened her early. It was a cable from Nick—a "Happy New Year" from Michael.

She showed the message to Tex when he came downstairs.

"The old-boy must be having a time for himself. Imagine New Year's in New York! Some day when we get some cash, we'll really travel, pet!" Then he added, "Sonny's going to Europe very soon. That's why she's east."

"How nice," Judith managed to make her voice sound natural.

All New Year's day people kept dropping in. Some of them stayed on for a pick-up supper. Tex had been drinking since noon. When Judith tried to stop him, he glared at her. No use trying to control him when he was in that mood.

It was long after 10 P. M., when the telephone rang. Judith answered. It was the airport. She called Tex and went back to their guests. Shortly she saw him in the hall with his coat over his arm. She went to him.

"I've got to go over to the airport for a little while. Won't be gone long."

"Flying!" Judith's voice held panic.

That made Tex furious. "Of course not!" he snapped. "It's Royce. Some mechanical trouble. All I have to do to those ships is to speak to 'em and they behave."

He was at the door. "Call a cab, Tex. Don't try to drive."

"OK," he threw her a kiss. "Tell the mob I'll be right back."

She stood there at the door, heard the car start. He was driving himself.

But Tex did not come back. The party broke up early. His desertion spoiled things. After everybody had gone, Judith tidied up the house while she waited for her husband.

If he had not been driving, Judith would not have worried. When she could stand it no longer, she telephoned the airport. He had been there and gone, was the report.

By three A. M., Judith was beside herself. She thought of calling the police, for she had visions of Tex crushed and broken in a hospital—or in jail! Even when sober Tex drove a car like a wild man!

The clock ticked loudly in the living room. Finally she determined not to wait up any longer. If he were all right, he would be furious to find her wide-eyed and terrified. Her nerves were in no shape to risk a quarrel. She left one light on downstairs and went on up to the bedroom.

Judith tried to sleep. It was no use. Finally the windows greyed. It was getting daylight. Another car was coming. . . . It stopped. Then she heard the garage doors close.

He had come home. Determinedly she lay down, composed herself, closed her eyes. Tex came in after a struggle with the key in the front door lock, turned off the light downstairs, and came tip-toeing up the stairs.

She tried to keep her breathing natural. Tex undressed in the dark, fell into his bed. Judith clenched her hands, waiting. Soon he was breathing regularly. She was shaking, so great was the reaction. He was home, safe.

In the morning Judith did not awaken until Tex called her from the kitchen: "I'm hungry. How about breakfast?"

Exhausted, Judith dragged herself out of bed, took a cold shower. Tex had the coffee going when she joined him in the kitchen.

"Good morning, sleepy head. Was it you or I who went off the reservation last night?" he asked gaily.

"I got mixed up with some of the gang at the airport. I'm sorry."

"That's all right. I was worried about you and the car."

"I should have called you but I intended to leave after every drink. Lord I feel awful! And I've got to go to work tonight."

So ended their New Year's celebration. Tex was honestly sorry. He and Judith went for a long walk around noon. Tex was in great good humor. Judith tried to forget the long hours of waiting.

"That's the way to handle him, not to make a scene," Judith congratulated herself on her restraint. She finally drove him to the airport for his nine o'clock run.

"I should be back by five o'clock tomorrow, unless the weather is bad."

"Shall I meet you?"

"Check with the boys first. If I'm coming in, you might run over if you haven't anything else to do."

Judith left him then. Upon returning home, she glanced at the evening papers. There on the front page was an item about Sonia: "She Missed the Boat," ran the caption over her picture. Sonia was to have sailed at midnight for the Mediterranean. But she'd arrived at the dock just in time to see her ship, with all her baggage aboard, out in mid-river.

Judith put the paper down, thoughtfully. Gradually a doubt began to seep into her mind. . . . Tex had been with Sonia! She was sure of it! Sonia had had somebody call Tex away. . . . In despair she went upstairs, took a hot bath, hoping to get a night's rest.

As always when Tex was flying, Judith telephoned the airport before she tried to sleep, asking about the weather. "Pretty bad, tonight, Mrs. Aimes," Dickinson in the weather bureau told her. But she feared to ask if any flights had been canceled.

Judith said goodnight and hung up quickly. She brooded for a long time. . . . But she must not jump at conclusions. The trouble was that the boys at operations office knew her voice. She hated this idea of checking up on Tex.

"I've got to know!"

If she called the ticket office, she might disguise her voice. Judith made an attempt.

"Did the ship for Miami leave at nine?" she asked.

"No, madam. It was canceled."

Judith got up and dressed slowly. She could not stay there in the house. She put on her coat and went out to get the car. It was bitterly cold. For a long time she drove around, aimlessly.

It was after two when she got home. She put the car away, came into the house. Tex had not come. She had not expected that he would.

Somehow she got through the night. But another day was ahead of her. She had to pull herself together. Judith tried to look over the huge pile of seed catalogues at her bedside. It was hopeless. She'd go into the city. It would pass the time, perhaps ease her anxiety. . . .

Judith spent an hour in a news-reel theater. She looked at spring clothes. But she was hardly conscious of what she saw. After lunch she stopped at a drugstore, telephoned to the hotel where Sonia had been staying.

"Madame sailed this afternoon," the clerk told her. So she had gone. Judith walked down Broadway, the winter wind biting her face. What should she do? Go back home, pretend she did not know?

At four she telephoned Emma, determined to tell her she would not be home for dinner. "Mr. Aimes called, he said not to pick him up at the airport, that he got in early. He'll be here by six," reported the maid.

With a strong effort, Judith decided to give Tex another chance. And so she returned home to meet her errand husband with a smile when he finally came. Tex went on blithely, unaware that Judith knew he had seen Sonia.

Thus their life slipped back into the old groove. They were happy again, or so Judith felt. She even did not think of the time when Sonia would come back. . . .

Early in March, Michael Dudley came home. When he telephoned Judith, she was glad indeed to hear his voice.

"Can you come for dinner some night soon?" she invited.

"I'm afraid not, Judith. I'm not as stoical as all that," he said.

"But we want to see you, hear all about your trip!"

"We'll have dinner together some night soon when Tex is not working," he promised. With that she had to be satisfied.

Judith eventually became restless and unhappy because Tex was staying out late. He made all kinds of excuses, but her life had become timed by the sound of closing garage doors. Only when she heard them shut, in the early morning hours, was her vigil ended. Tex was home, safe.

She began to think again about Sonia. . . . To worry. Had she returned from abroad without publicity? One morning when Tex rushed off to the airport with only two hours' sleep, Judith telephoned the hotel where Sonia had stayed on her last visit. Sonia was not in her room.

"There any message?"

"No, I'll call again."

Judith hung up the receiver carefully. She sat a long time with her hands in her lap, utterly defeated.

Then began a succession of terrible days and more terrible nights. She came to dread the lamp light. It meant waiting again. Night after night she lay in her bed waiting, frantic, until she heard the garage doors close, knew that Tex had finally come home.

When Tex was with her, he was as amusing and kind as ever. He said he was busy, that they were trying to put some new ships "on the line." Judith accepted his words in silence. There seemed to be nothing else to do.

There was nobody to whom she could turn. Not Lanning again. She couldn't. Nor Michael Dudley. There was a new restraint between her and Michael now.

RECIPES: Those Which Interest Women

STEAK A GOOD CHOICE ON

MENU TO PLEASE THE MEN

Modern Broiling Methods So Easy We Can Serve Their Favorite Meat Often

American men like "good, thick steaks."

And to a man, a steak isn't a steak unless it's "good and thick."

Inez S. Willson, home economist, points out that a thick steak will serve as many people as the same amount of meat in smaller steaks. Since the meat will be more flavorful and juicy, everyone, especially Dad, will be perfectly satisfied.

Steaks of Many Sizes

If the family is large, perhaps one of the sirloin steaks from the loin end will be the best choice. T-bone and porterhouse from the shortloin, also will serve the average family generously. Club steaks are smaller, but each one, if it is cut thick, will serve two.

Modern Broiling Easy

Broiling according to the modern method is so easy that the young daughter of the family can be left in charge.

For a juicy, uniformly broiled steak, deliciously browned on the surface and delicately pink within, a moderate temperature should be used.

How to Broil a Steak

Place the steak on the broiler rack and adjust the rack so the top surface of the steak is three inches from the source of heat. This will give a broiling temperature of about 350 degrees F., which is a moderate temperature. If the construction of your broiler won't permit the three-inch space recommended, regulate the temperature control accordingly.

Turn Steak But Once

Turn the steak when the upper side is nicely browned. Salt it just before turning and turn it carefully with a fork inserted in the fat. When the other side is browned the steak will be done. For a medium done steak about an inch and a half thick, allow 35 minutes for broiling. For a steak two inches thick allow 45 minutes. For rare steaks in either case deduct five minutes from the time periods just stated.

Economize With Pork Specialties

Here's a news flash for all women who are looking for economical meat dishes. It's a market tip right from meat headquarters and is worth investigating in your own market.

If pork kidneys and pork tongues, served as real delicacies by many a high-priced chef, aren't familiar features of your menu, just try some. Inez S. Willson, home economist, reminds you that market prices are particularly conducive to economy now and if you follow cooking directions for these economical pork cuts, you'll be surprised and delighted with the tasty dishes which result.

A good health story supplements this economy message and our claim for a rating of "good food." Pork kidneys are an excellent source of the factors of Vitamin B complex, nicotinic acid, riboflavin and thiamin. They also are a rich source of iron and phosphorus, besides, of course, efficient proteins. Pork tongues, too, are high in food value and in flavor.

Cook Kidneys Quickly

Pork kidneys should be quickly cooked because overcooking toughens the fibers. However, all fresh pork products should be cooked until all trace of pink has changed to grey or brown. First, soak the pork kidneys in cold, salted water for about an hour. Split and trim out the hard tissue. At this point, for added flavor and tenderness, we like to marinate or cook the kidneys in a well-seasoned French dressing for half an hour, but you may omit this step.

Here are two recommended recipes:

Broiled Kidneys

Prepare the pork kidneys as directed above. Brush with melted butter. Broil about 3 inches from the source of heat until browned—about 15 to 20 minutes. Serve with lemon, catsup, or broiled tomatoes and a buttered green vegetable.

Panbroiled Kidneys

Prepare the pork kidneys as directed. Cut in 1-inch pieces or leave in halves. Brown in melted butter. Serve with a tomato sauce made by browning 1/4 cup diced onion in 3 tablespoons of butter. Add 2 tablespoons of flour, then stir in 1 cup cooked tomatoes or tomato juice. Simmer. Add 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. This is enough sauce for eight pork kidneys.

Pork Tongues Also Economical

The second economy pork item is pork tongues. Though these are small, the tongues should be simmered, not boiled, for about two hours. Add a few peppercorns or a bay leaf to the water if you wish. When thoroughly tender, the skin is easily removed.

Meat Important In Summer Diets

Because it's so easy to feel that it's just "too hot to eat," summer time menus should please the eye and tease the palate. If the family's appetite is lagging, the homemaker must make each meal look so tempting and taste so good that despite climbing temperatures, meal-time will still be a pleasure.

Whether the mercury column wavers at ninety or drops to the bottom, our bodies require the same amount of protein, minerals and vitamins for proper nourishment. Caloric intake alone is adapted to the weather.

Authorities Suggest Summer Diet

The American Medical Association substantiates this theory in its suggestion for hot weather diets. "We may well cut down on heat-producing foods during warm weather, but cannot neglect fruits, fresh vegetables and some good protein foods, such as meat, eggs and milk."

Inez S. Willson, home economist, reminds us that meat is our richest source of protein needed to build and repair body tissue. The importance and quality of the protein in meat together with its value as a source of minerals and vitamins make it impossible to use a substitute for meat in the diet.

Meat is valuable for its own appetite appeal and because its high content of thiamin (B1) stimulates the appetite itself.

Meat Variety Solves Problem

The person in charge of the meals is of course interested in serving foods that are easy to prepare as well as those that give proper nourishment. Cold meats and ready-to-serve meat answer the question on many occasions. A large roast can be served attractively for more than one meal and thus helps to cut time spent in the kitchen. Sausage, casserole dishes and broiled meats are also easy to prepare. Meat salads offer one of the most attractive ways of serving health-giving foods in an appetizing way.

The well-rounded summer diet as planned by the smart homemaker will include meat one or more times every day supplemented by an adequate supply of fresh fruits, vegetables, eggs and milk.

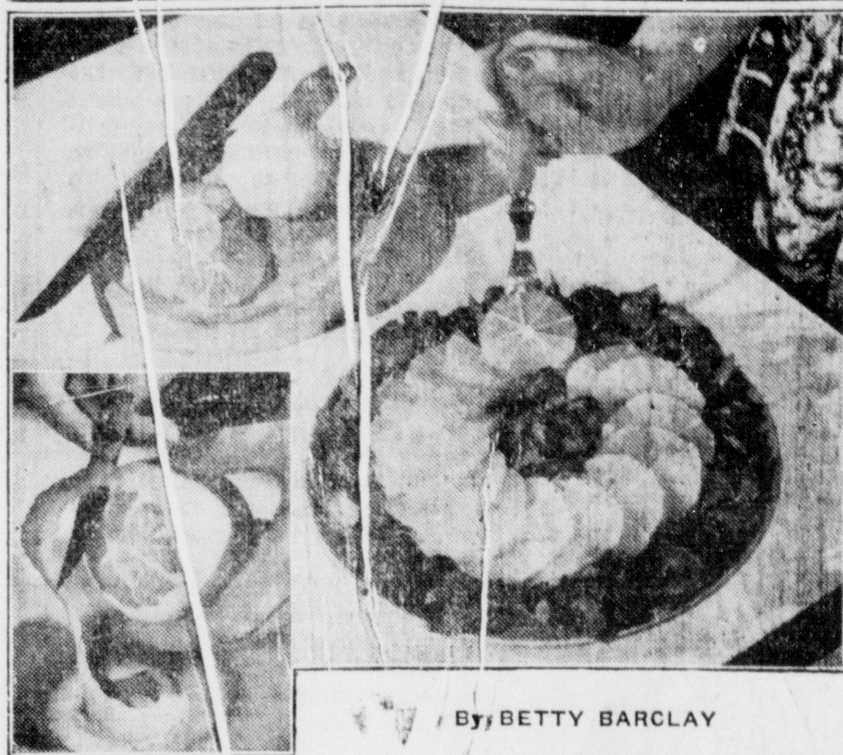

Bacon in Waffles Improves Flavor

Did you ever hear anyone say she hoped she'd always like ice cream because it was so good to eat?

Well, that's probably the way many of us feel about bacon and waffles. Bacon is so tasty and so very good with waffles that we'll want to enjoy the combination always.

Inez S. Willson, home economist, proffers a subtle way of incorporating the flavor in "baconized waffles." Subtle is the word for when you eat the waffle you can't find the bacon but you keep wondering what it is that

An Unfinished Salad Symphony

By BETTY BARCLAY

When Grandfather succumbed to spring fever, Grandmother prescribed plenty of sulphur and molasses. How much more palatable are the fresh fruits and greens which constitute today's prescription for that seasonal complaint!

Combining fruits and greens such as lettuce, chicory or watercress to make a salad is distinctly twentieth century American. At the top of the list of salad fruits is the orange. Oranges are available the year around from California groves, where the Navel variety ripens during the winter and Valencia oranges are picked all summer. This season the fruit is unexcelled.

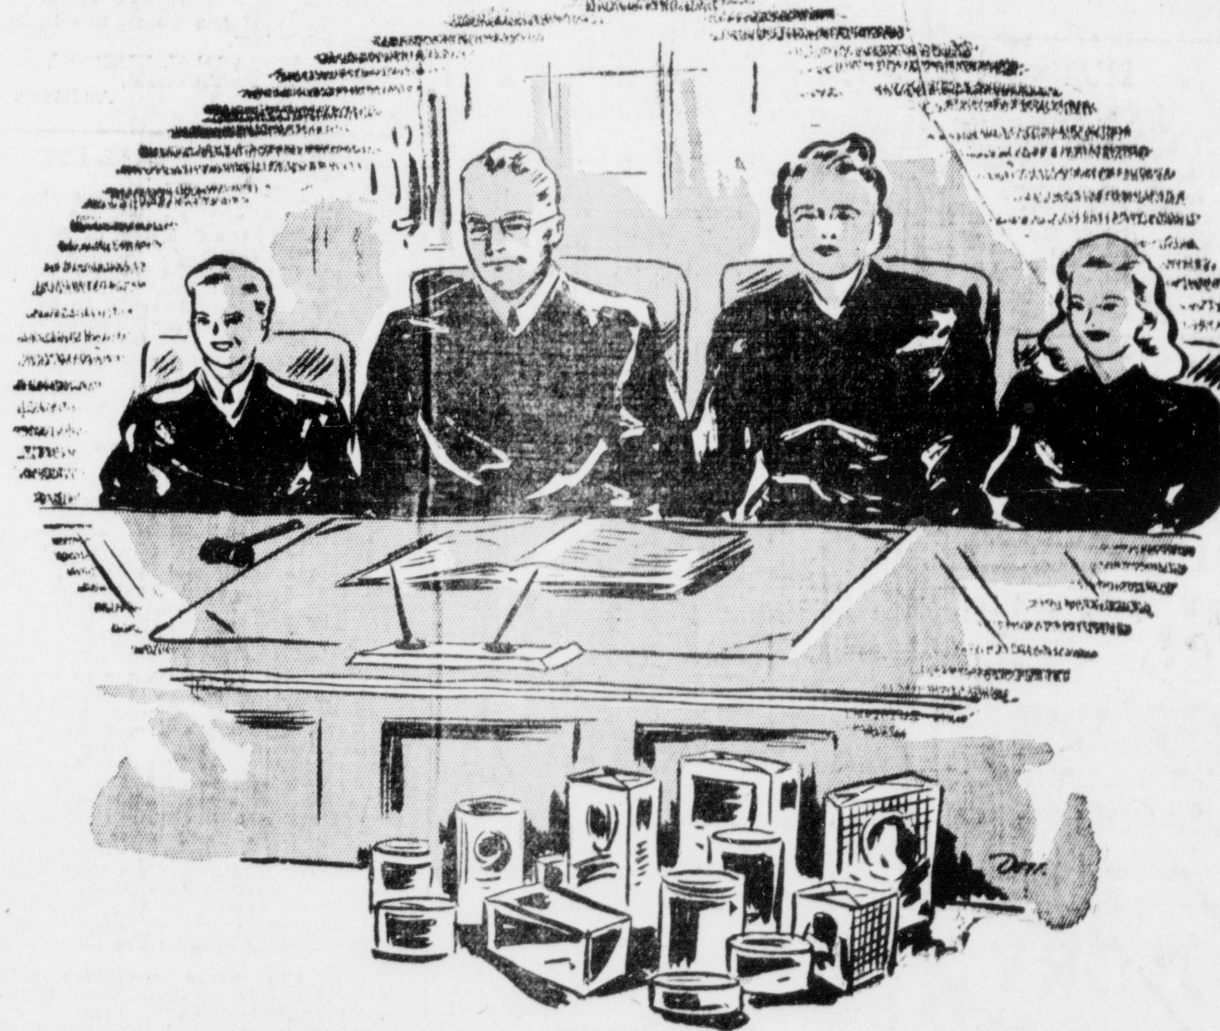

In addition to the beautiful minerals and vitamins in which oranges abound, making them among the most potent as well as the most palatable of spring tonics, they are marvelous mixers with seasonal fruits. Navel oranges are easiest to divide into sections; when using the summer Valencias it is usually better to slice them. In any case the entire outer skin and membrane should be peeled away from the fruit, down to the juicy meat, as shown in the photograph.

There are so many ways in which a simple salad of orange slices on a bed of greens may be completed that this one was left unfinished for you to center as desired. Here are some suggestions for topping the salad in the making.

Any berries in season.
Melon and cantaloupe balls.
Tablespoon each minced celery and green pepper.
Tablespoon each minced celery and sweet onion.
Prunes or dates stuffed with cream cheese.
Walnut-cheese bonbons.
Avocado balls or slices.
Fresh cherries.
Banana slices.
Frosted grapes (grapes dipped in egg white and sugar).
Mayonnaise and pimiento strips.
Tablespoon cottage cheese.
Sherbet of any variety.

An excellent dressing for fruit salads uses:
3 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons orange juice
4 tablespoons oil
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
Mix all ingredients thoroughly.

SAN FRANCISCO — (INS) — The great weapon on the side of humanity on Europe's blood-soaked battlefields is the wonder drug, sulfanilamide, declared Dr. A. R. Richardson of Stanford Hospital. It's value has a grimmer side, also, Dr. Richardson told the State Dental Association, because its power as an antiseptic saves manpower through halting infection in minor wounds. It ranks in importance with arms and ammunition as an aid to the warring powers.

The Supreme Court of American Business

There is a court that judges American Business... a court whose decisions are absolute—final.

It is the great American household—your family and mine. It passes judgment on every American Product... on the quality and price... on the package... on the merchant who sells it.

It is the buyer who has the power to judge whether or not an industry shall survive—whether the service is worthy and the price is fair.

It is not by accident nor by tricks of words that products in highest favor with the public are those that are advertised most.

Advertising is the force which makes possible national distribution of products... makes possible large-scale manufacturing which brings down prices. Today you may buy advertised brands, with assured uniform quality and style, at prices lower than ever.

Every national advertiser knows that he cannot exist without maintaining and improving quality... without the approval of the supreme court of American Business.

tively meaningless and unimportant. The Republican platform certainly is a feeble, commonplace, wishy-washy document, with its foreign-affairs plank subject to any interpretation the candidate chooses to put on it. As for Mr. Roosevelt, his whole New Deal philosophy, and the completeness with which he repudiated that really fine 1932 platform upon which he was first elected, tends to make any platform upon which he stands trivial and insignificant. The truth is that in this campaign the candidates are their own platforms. What they say and do and are will be the yardstick by which the voters will measure them. The platforms may be solemnly referred to from time to time and the pretense of taking them seriously sustained. But, actually they are in process of being forgotten.

"THE revolting thing about the action of Administration leaders in accepting a plank drawn by the isolationists was not so much its effect, which would have been bad, but the revelation of the extent to which Mr. Roosevelt's personal representatives would have gone to keep down an opposition that would disclose how hollow was their 'draft.' To avert a floor fight over an anti-third-term resolution, which would have shown a formidable minority against Mr. Roosevelt's attempt, they were willing to do a craven and despicable thing. It is as significant as it is revealing."

THE second thing that protrudes in the convention record is Mr. Roosevelt's message to the delegates, transmitted through Senator Barkley, in which he declared that he had neither desire nor purpose to stay longer in office and wanted the delegates free to vote for what candidates they pleased. When one considers that he, personally, has been for three days conferring as to who should be his running mate; when it is considered that he has been in constant communication with the men who run this convention; when it is considered that they, with his full knowledge and approval, have been frantically working to keep other candidates from even putting their names before the delegates; when one considers the personal pressure he put on Mr. Farley to keep him from pulling out, as he wants to do right after his successor is chosen; when one considers these—and other things—this seems to be one of the most disingenuous and insincere statements ever made by a public man.

BEFORE he framed it, Mr. Roosevelt, of course, knew—as did every one of his representatives—that he not only would be nominated but would accept. It is clear enough now that the secret Mr. Farley has been keeping so long was that Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate and that what was being done for him to obtain delegates was with his approval. There is such overwhelming evidence that he has calculatedly connived in the third-term movement that it no longer seems open to dispute. The truth is that the acts of Mr. Roosevelt flatly contradict his words.

WHEN a public man writes a letter or makes a statement such as this, there are two questions—first, what does he say? Second, why does he say it? So far as the second question is concerned, in this case, it seems clear that Mr. Roosevelt sent his message because his managers here believed that without something of the sort they were not going to be able to make the "draft" look plausible to the country and it is vitally essential that it should so look. Every politician here is entirely clear as to the purpose of the message. To assume that the people, as a whole, will not at least sense the cunning politics behind it is to assume that they have very little intelligence.

STATE NEWS

STATE COLLEGE (INS)—All 30 students who took the civilian pilot training course at the Pennsylvania State College during the past term successfully completed their training and have now been granted private pilot licenses.

Professor F. C. Stewart, in charge of the Summer flying program, stated that 21 Summer students are now being trained. Additional applicants for Summer training are still being examined.

HERSHEY (INS)—Courses in sheet metal and machine shop will open in the Hershey public schools on Monday, July 22, as part of the national defense training program in the local and nearby communities. Courses are open for those persons who are employed in jobs essential to the national defense program. The school will also provide pre-employment "refresher" courses for workers selected from public employment office registers, who by training will become qualified for employment in jobs essential to the national defense program.

CROYDON

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fell, on Sunday, 30 relatives and friends gathered in honor of Mrs. William Bartholomew's birthday anniversary which was celebrated on the lawn. Dinner was served, also refreshments in the evening.

TRAVELING WITH BABY

In step with modern modes of travel are the modern means for taking care of baby that allow him to go along on vacation trips. Even though he is not yet a year old and seems to require a great deal of attention, you'll find it almost as easy to give him his meals and keep him on schedule while you're enroute as it is at home.

Hostesses, stewards, gas station attendants and waiters are trained and willing to help you keep your baby healthy and happy throughout his first journey. Any time you desire, oranges will be squeezed, bottles warmed, vegetables heated and water boiled. Your baby is treated as a royal master by these courteous helpers.

Modern foods also are on the list of baby's travel helpers. For example, if baby has reached the stage where he has greater variety in his diet—milk, orange and tomato juice, strained cereals, strained vegetables and a little meat, as well as strained fruits—there's no need to worry about having a fresh supply of these. When you're making your vacation preparations, just include a selection of the convenient and nutritious canned strained foods in your list of travel necessities.

Strained foods are sometimes added to baby's diet when he is four months old and possibly not until he is five or six months, depending upon when the doctor thinks he is ready for them. The canned strained foods are prepared under controlled laboratory conditions which make for the highest possible retention of valuable vitamins and minerals. Also, they have their natural tempting colors and flavors, and these factors contribute to the baby's enjoyment of vegetables and fruits. When baby's mealtime comes around, all one has to do is have the contents of the tiny 4 1/2-oz. cans heated over hot water.

In every way possible one should keep the baby's routine the same as it would be at home. However, it is best to avoid having to give the baby a feeding just before starting on the journey, since the excitement and bustle of departure might cause digestive trouble. Postpone the feeding of the baby until he is comfortably established in the train, car, airplane or boat.

On a journey such as this it is also important to have enough extra sweaters and blankets along just in case there are sudden changes in temperature. However, a baby should never be dressed so warmly that he perspires. If the weather is very warm, it is wise to give the baby frequent sponge baths.

At the end of the trip, try if possible to give the baby several extra quiet days for more rest and you'll find his return to normal routine is comparatively easy for you.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Today's opening at the Grand Theatre brings together James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, stars of "The Fighting 69th" and Ann Sheridan, sensation of "It All Came True" in "Torrid Zone," new comedy romance, crammed with actions, thrills and excitement. As the title indicates, "Torrid Zone" has a tropical setting, down in the banana country, where the big fruit companies own and manage vast plantations. O'Brien and Cagney are cast as rough and ready plantation bosses, while Miss Sheridan portrays a torch singer from the U. S. A., who comes to the tropics because she figures redheads will be more of a novelty there. Her adeptness at dealing cards is also an asset.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Put Hal Roach's new prehistoric film spectacle, "One Million B. C." down as the next picture you will run—now walk to see. The new production was given a gala premiere last night at the Bristol Theatre. Aside from being sheer entertainment on every count, "One Million B. C." is an outstanding screen achievement and adds another laurel to the brilliant career of Producer Hal Roach.

RITZ THEATRE

A quiet, hard-working man who thinks of movies in terms of I-joints, beams and floor supports, Sam Harwick's office is tucked away on the Columbia lot amidst surroundings as glamorous as a truck. But Harwick, Columbia's superintendent of construction, has helped bring some of Hollywood's greatest pictures to the screen. He's plotted and built hundreds of intricate sets and trick effects, and he's currently responsible for the present activity of Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas. The trio, currently starred at the Ritz Theatre in "Too Many Husbands," bounce each other around in an hilarious free-for-all during the hectic romantic comedy.

TRIP TO SHORE

TULLYTOWN, July 18—The following enjoyed a bus trip to Atlantic City, N. J. Saturday, sponsored by Tullytown Home and School League: Mrs. Sarah Cavin and son, Mrs. Lulu Leed, Mrs. William Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. Mfs.

PRICE'S HOME-RUN SAVES WILSON IX FROM A SHUT-OUT

Fifth Ward Wins, 11-2, Increasing Its Lead On First Place

PRICE, LOSER'S SHOW

Galzerano Limits Losers To 5 Hits; Other Bingles, Roe and Mannocchi

A home run from the bat of Price with Roe on base saved the Wilson Distillery softball team from a shutout last evening on the high school field as the Fifth Ward team increased its lead on first place in the Community Softball League, beating the whiskey workers, 11-2.

In fact, Price was the whole show for the losers as he had three out of three with the stick and only committed one miscue in the ten chances he received at shortstop.

On the hill for the winners was "Huey" Galzerano who limited the Wilson team to five hits, the other bingles going to Roe and Mannocchi.

Leading the attack on "Charlie" Mazzella for the Fifth Warders were "Big Wheat" Iannucci and "Boom" Peterpaul.

BELIEVES THAT DEMPSEY COULD STAGE COMEBACK

By Bill Zimmerman
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(INS)—Col. Harvey L. Miller, president of the National Boxing Association, today declared in an interview that Jack Dempsey could successfully stage a comeback for the world heavyweight championship—if he "hits 'em."

Miller's statement was made in commenting on reports that the 45-year-old Dempsey, king of the heavyweights in the golden era of boxing's million-dollar gates, is planning to meet Chilean Arturo Godoy this fall, after a summer of mitt "exhibitions" against wrestlers.

The Manassas Manier recently knocked out wrestler Cowboy Luttrell at Atlanta, Ga. The meeting caused "something of a controversy in fight circles, many protesting against making of the match, and refusing to see it as the forerunner of a comeback by a great champion.

(Editors' note: At Detroit, Monday, Dempsey stiffened another wrestler—his one Bill Curry—to register the second straight K. O. of his "comeback.")

Miller, however, refused to accept the view that champions can't come back. He declined to speculate on the chances of "Old Man" Dempsey against heavyweight king Joe Louis, but he did observe:

"Forty-five years is pretty old, but it has been done before and can be done again. Take the case of Johnny Buff, Fitzsimmons and Jack Britton, three of the greatest champions in history. The heavyweight champion, Buff, never had on a glove until he was 29 years old and neither did the famous heavyweight Fitzsimmons, who won the title when he was 34 years old. Britton, the welterweight titleholder, and Fitzsimmons both fought successfully when they were Dempsey's age."

TEN BOUTS ARE TO BE CARDED MONDAY NIGHT

Ten bouts will be on the card of the opening show of amateur boxing to be held in the St. Ann's A. A. arena, Wood and Franklin streets, Monday night. The bouts will be held under sanction of the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

Over 40 local boys are taking advantage of the training facilities offered by the St. Ann's A. A. in its "gym." These boys will be on the shows as they progress.

One of the favorite clubs which has entered the Bucks County tournament is that which is managed by Johnny Raceno and trained by Tally Schara. Both former amateurs here. They have given the name of their team as the Baco boys.

"Hokey" Loughton, well-known Croydon fighter, has his team listed under the Croydon Boxing Club, while the Franklin A. C. is also represented. Lenny Dever, Fourth Ward fighter, has a team and is expected to enter the tourney shortly.

There will be a big reduction in the admission prices to the bouts, seat being divided into three sections. Over 2,000 seats will be available.

WINNER OF 1939 RACE IS IN STOCK CAR EVENT

LANGHORNE, July 18.—Mark Light, winner of the 1939 Langhorne 200-mile AAA stock car races, a Pennsylvania Dutchman from Lebanon, and Everett Saylor, Dayton, Ohio, making his first bid for stock car honors, are the early entries for the 1940 All-American 200-mile championship stock car races which will be held at Langhorne Speedway on Sunday, August 4th.

This was the announcement today of Ralph A. Hankinson, owner and operator of the course, the only promoter who in the past four years has been granted a sanction from the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association to conduct stock car events.

Light, like a figure from Horatio Alger, Jr. or O. Henry, started in last place last year and finally wound up the winner after all the tapes and scores were checked. He drove a Buick to victory last year and says he will drive the same car this year. Saylor will drive his Packard coupe which he uses also to tow his Lucky Teter race car from meet to meet. It is a 1940 model.

Strictly stock, pleasure cars, models 1938, 1939 and 1940 are eligible to compete this year. The only probable change from last year is that the AAA Contest Board may hear from Hankinson's request that cut-outs may be removed to add a little noise to the occasion. Motors purred almost noiselessly last year and it was Emanuel Cooper, Washington gentleman driver, who earned the sobriquet of "Speed Hornblower" by laying lustily on the horn when he wished to pass a competitor.

It is thought that ultimately the Trenton boys who finished second and third last year, Walt Kelper, in a Ford, and Bert Ross, in a Willys, will be back in the benzine battles August 4th. Trenton only being seven miles from Langhorne, these riders thought they did very well to come into the heavy sugar with only 14 miles for the roundtrip from home to track after riding 200 sizzling miles.

Golf Match Planned By Clubs of County Seat

DOYLESTOWN, July 18.—Speeches have been "banned" by Doylestown Kiwanis Club, during the hot Summer months, and programs of different type of entertainment are in order.

At the meeting on Tuesday, program chairman Frank L. Worthington, announced that the annual Kiwanis-Rotary golf match will be played Tuesday, July 23, at the Doylestown Country Club, with dinner following, at Doylestown Inn. Rotary won the match last year and first leg on the "Hiram H. Keller Trophy," awarded by President Judge Keller, a member of Kiwanis. In addition to the trophy, other prizes, for all participants will be offered next week.

On July 30, the report of the convention of Kiwanis International recently held at Minneapolis will be submitted by President Harold Zeek and Vice President Nate Gorelick. At this meeting Kiwanian Gorelick will show colored motion pictures taken on the convention trip.

hart of the British Third Hussars, is relieved to have her trio of tots in a safe place.

Brian, four, and Charles, six, miss their dad, who is fighting for his beloved country, and do not hesitate to let it be known. "He is fighting for England, and he'll keep on until we win," is the way Charles puts it.

The Lockharts are guests of Miss Mary Chambers, here.

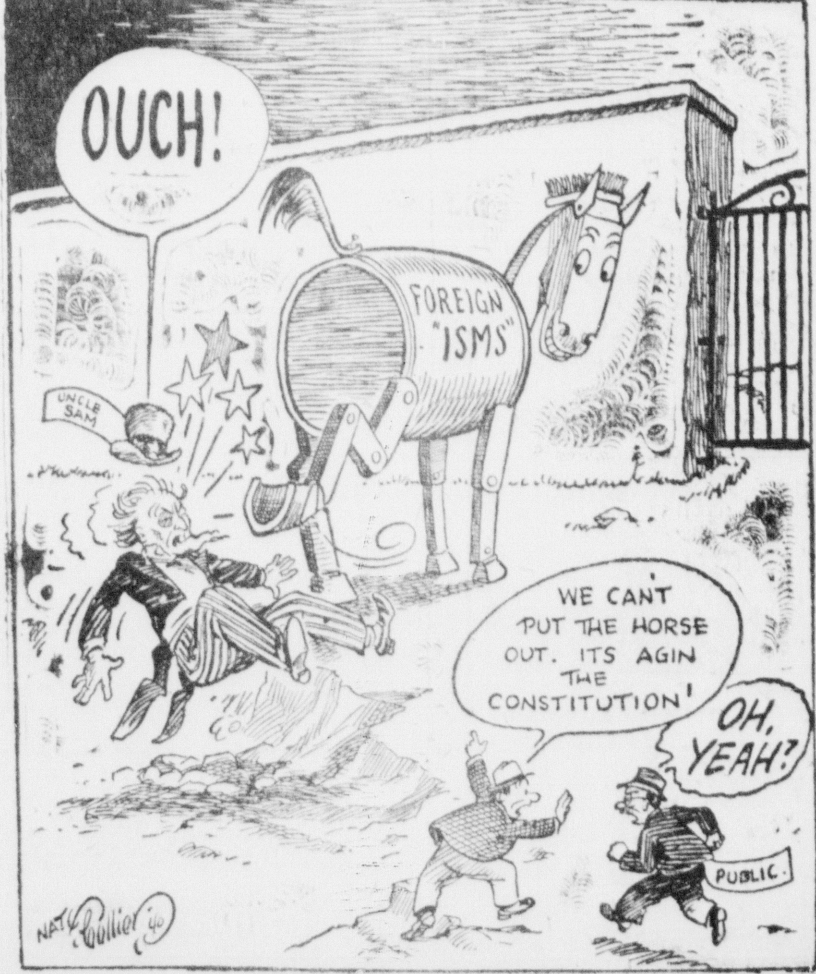

The older lad, Charles, tells of seeing enemy planes on numerous occasions, "but I wasn't frightened," he adds, "not even when they dropped the bombs."

victory than that of the German Panzer Divisions on the Meuse. No surgeon ever performed a more deft and masterful operation. That victory, within a week from the start of the great offensive, beat France. You can't get away from that. You can talk about treachery and "sell-outs" and all the rest, but the fact remains France lost because she was thoroughly beaten on the field.

French troops fought with flaming heroism. But their military machine proved to be a horse and buggy affair against a great, streamlined Martian express.

The French intelligence service knew this great instrument was being constructed. But during the years before the war and during the months before the fatal offensive, internal dissension, incredible factional hatreds rotted away the spine of France while Germany waited to strike—a lean, hungry, savage cat at the rat-hole in the Maginot Line—waiting for the moment to pounce.

In another chapter I shall tell of the conditions which made it possible for them to leap at that rat-hole with such devastating success. (Another article in this series will follow tomorrow.)

was said to have been shot down before the others turned tail and sped away.

A short while later, German planes raided southeast English towns. Four persons were killed.

Other German bombers dropped explosives on several points in southeast and southwest England, killing a "few" persons and injuring several others, according to an official statement.

A lone German bomber dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs over a town in northeast Scotland, but the missiles fell in open spaces and did no damage, it was announced.

But at the same time it was announced that RAF fliers had bombed and temporarily wrecked the important double aqueduct of the Drottund-Kms Canal, major Nazi transportation link.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—Although the world premiere of "All This, and Heaven Too" is already a fortnight old "what they wore" will be of interest to summer formal fashions for many weeks to come.

Bette Davis, the star of the picture, bowed to compliments not only on her acting but on her gown, which copied the Hawaiian holoku. This is the silhouette the natives of the islands borrowed years ago from the female missionaries and turned into a scintillating mode for evening. The skirt, though full, appears pencil slim by being pulled to the side and draped like a train over one arm revealing a matching ruffled petticoat. Bette's, in white sheer, had a very modest square neckline. She wore an antique gold bracelet set with rubies.

Yellow dotted the audience in various shades with Ida Lupino a picture in candle-light yellow chiffon made in classic flowing lines, long tight sleeves, and full skirt. Ida pinned a single brown orchid in her hair. Jean Parker accented a yellowish sun-tan jersey with gold mesh pumps and matching bag.

Among summer's earlier predictions one notes that gloves will contribute to the charm of all ensembles. Therefore, we were especially impressed by two unusual pairs at the premiere. With an emerald taffeta bouffant, befitting Geraldine Fitzgerald's Irish ancestry, she wore matching length taffeta gloves. Jane Wyman, in dusky pink chiffon, pulled formal length pink chiffon gloves over her elbows. These were so sheer they allowed her ruby red nail polish to shine through. Jane's frock was a one-shoulder Grecian gown with the covered shoulder drape caught with a crystal plume.

Satin combined with chiffon made Anna Sten outstanding in a bouffant skirt of blue satin with bodice in white chiffon encrusted with satin flowers edged with silver paillettes. The Countess Barbara Haultwitz-Reventlow wore a Lanvin in gleaming black satin made with hobbie skirt, and a short bolero, with long sleeves of solid jet.

the season in white pique, the skirt heavily embroidered in aztec design, over this she wore princess full-length coat in pique.

After the premier was over we had definitely decided that every conceivable fabric had walked the red carpet which makes summer evening fashions, as the French say, "a la universale."
